Today begins a day at Athens High School—one day seemingly so insignificant, but yet so important in the myriad days of the year. Little moments make the year, and all of our todays are building blocks of our futures. We experience the thrills, the shattered hopes, the high expectations—the trials and rewards—that unite us as a student body. We share today, although we often forget that it is not any other day. Today we cheer and yell our teams to victories, we recognize the merits of fellow students, and we share the good times, as well as the bad, with others.

It is the friendship and the togetherness that unite us in group spirit.

Deborah,
You are truly a great girl. You have such a sweet, sincere personality. I know you will go far in life. Deborah, you have been so much fun to know. I will never forget cheering & the time I got in so much trouble with Coach Carlick. Well, I'm almost out of space, I better go. I'm so happy you made cheering - you'll be great. Good luck forever in everything you do. You deserve only the very best out of life.
Love,
Lynne C.

Sharing common interests and desiring common ends, we work to make our school better. We realize that the success we seek can be attained through diligent work and efforts.

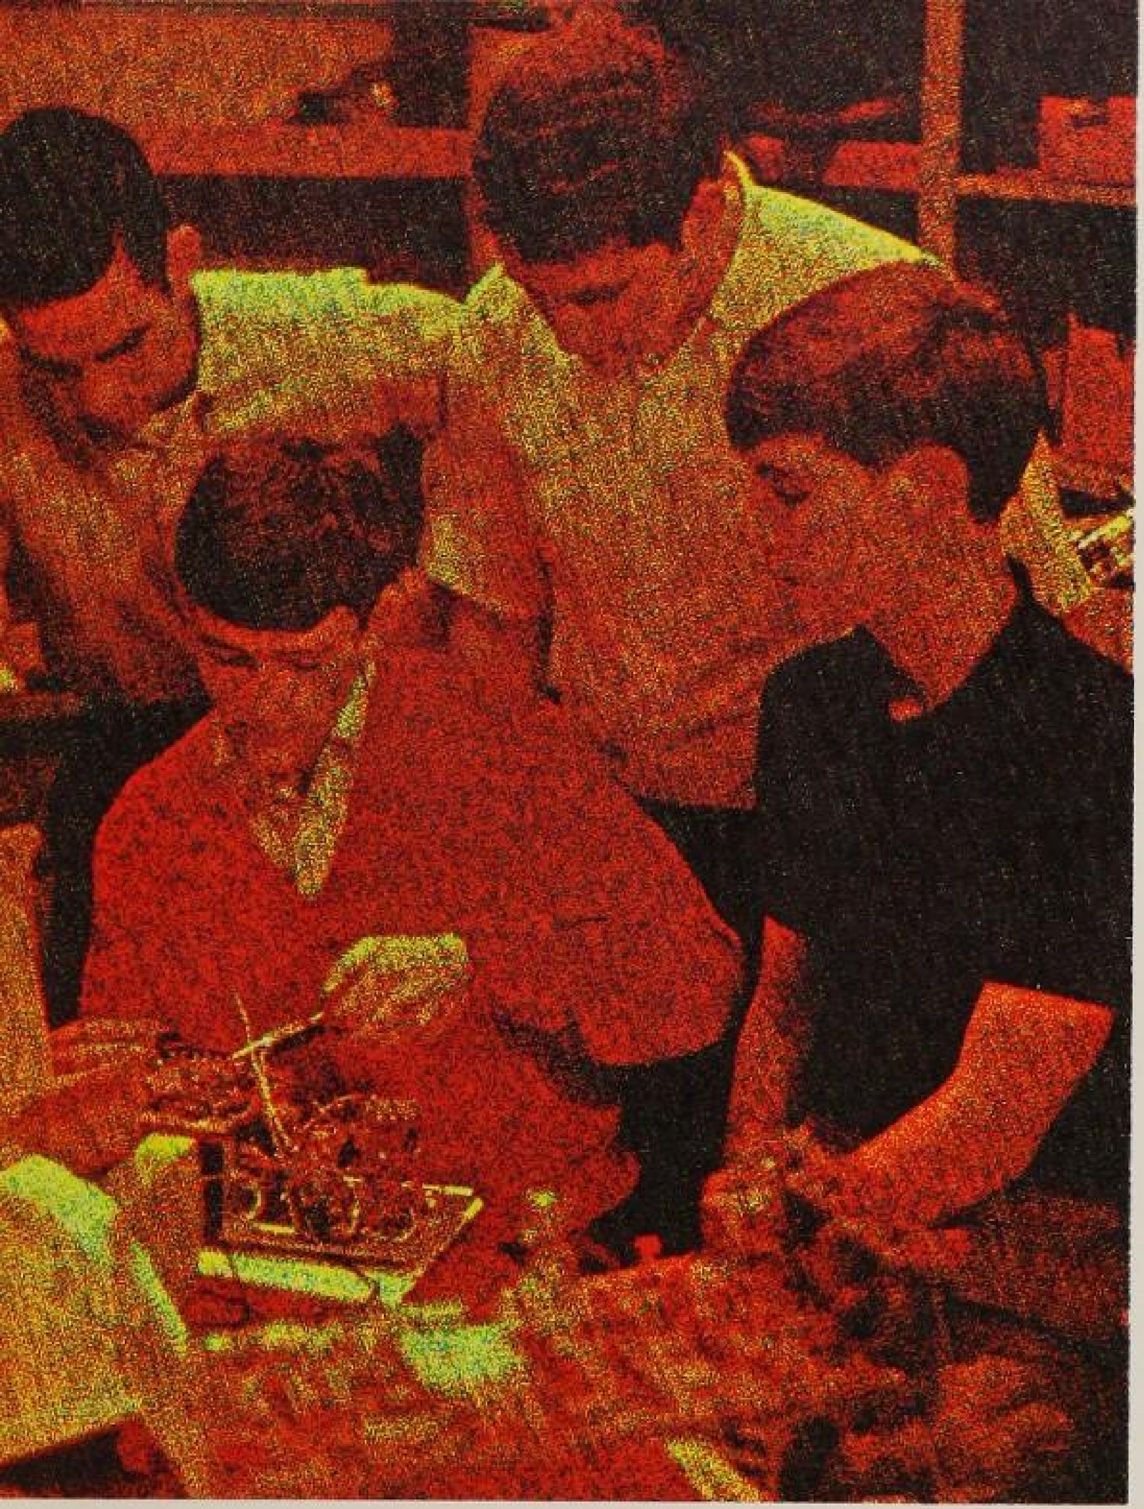

Deborah,
You're a sweet girl and will go far in life. You'll be a great cheerleader. I hope we have some classes next year. Good luck and be good to Mike. See ya next year and be a good girl this summer.
Love ya,
Nancy O.

Athens High—its way of life—is a part of all that we are today.

Our teachers and friends inspire us to keep our aspirations high. With our potentiality for success still young, we seek to know more about ourselves.

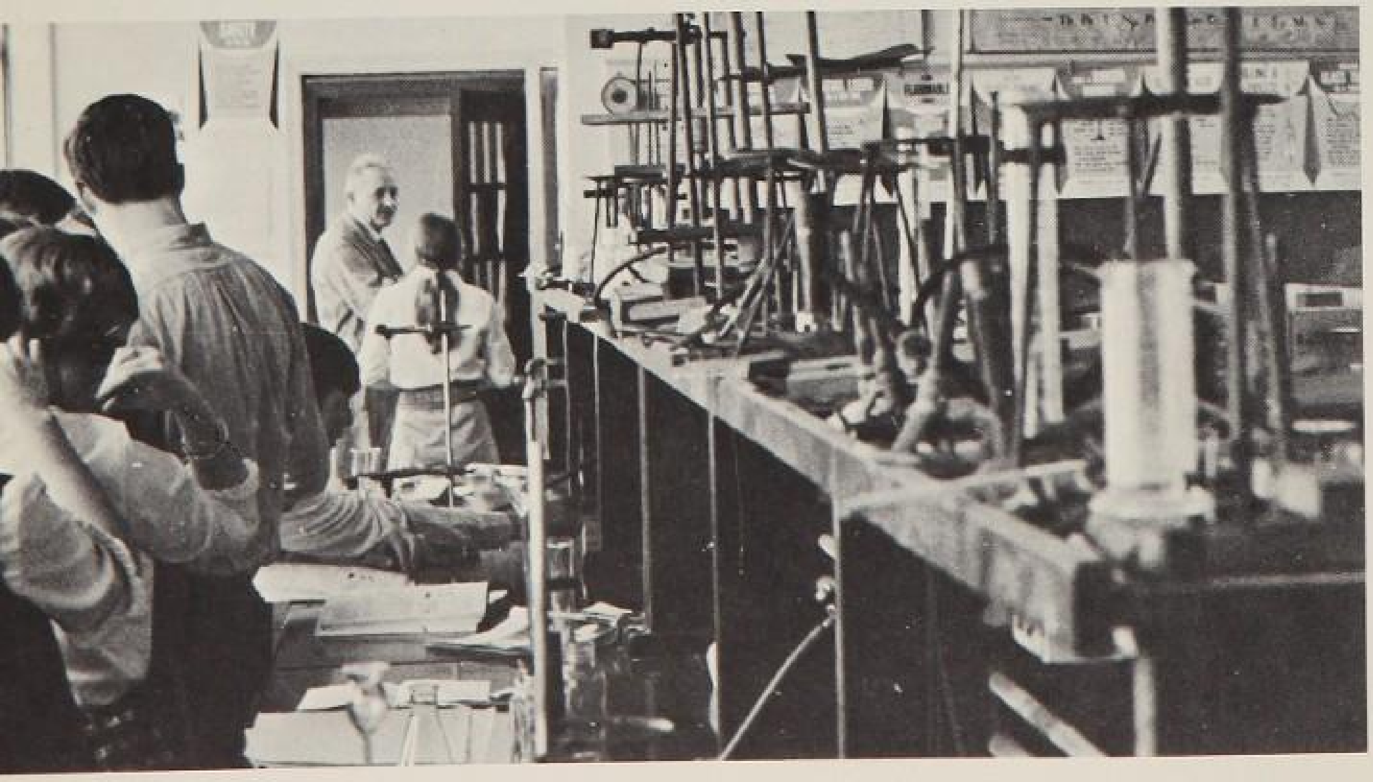

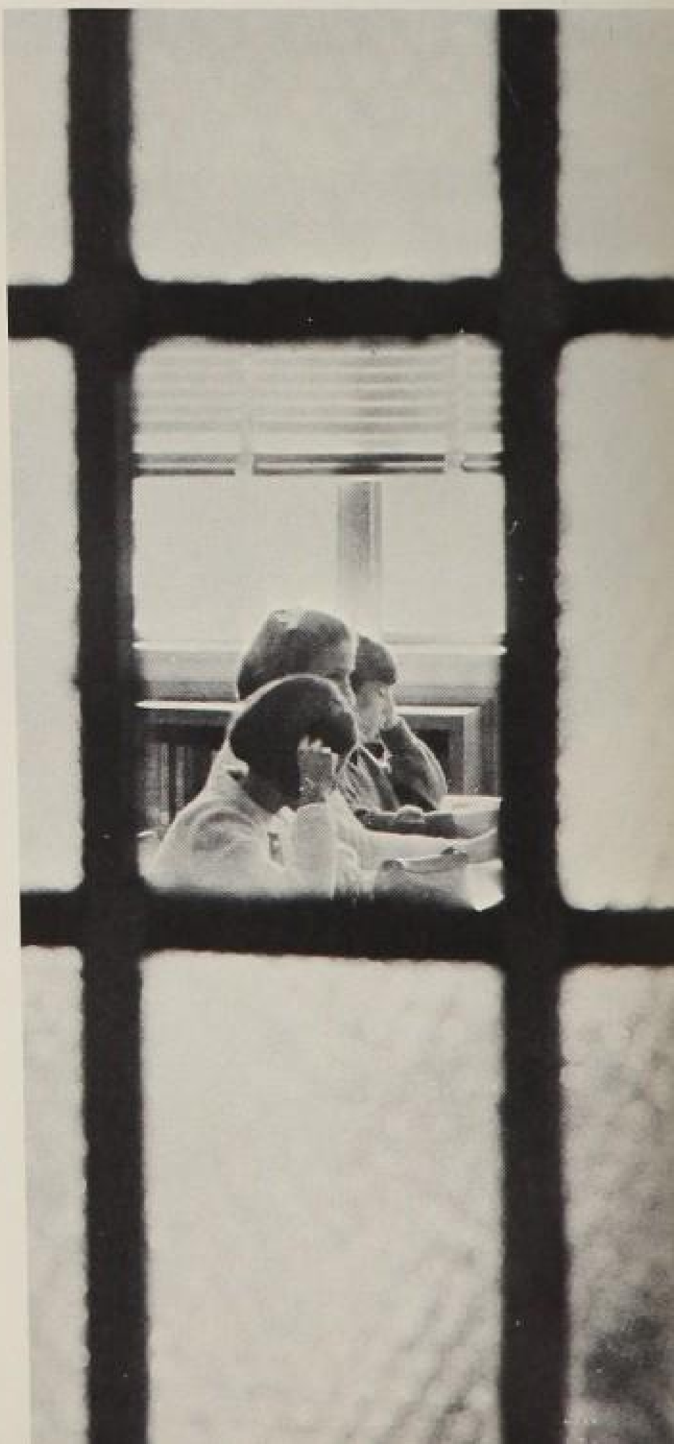

We require responsibility and take advantage of our opportunities to serve the school. We appreciate those who help and encourage us in our efforts.

Through individual skills and talents, we collectively, as well as singly, achieve success in our activities. Our team efforts are rewarded by the winning touchdown or basket, the split-second dash over the track's finish line, as well as by the winning debate or one-act play in competition.

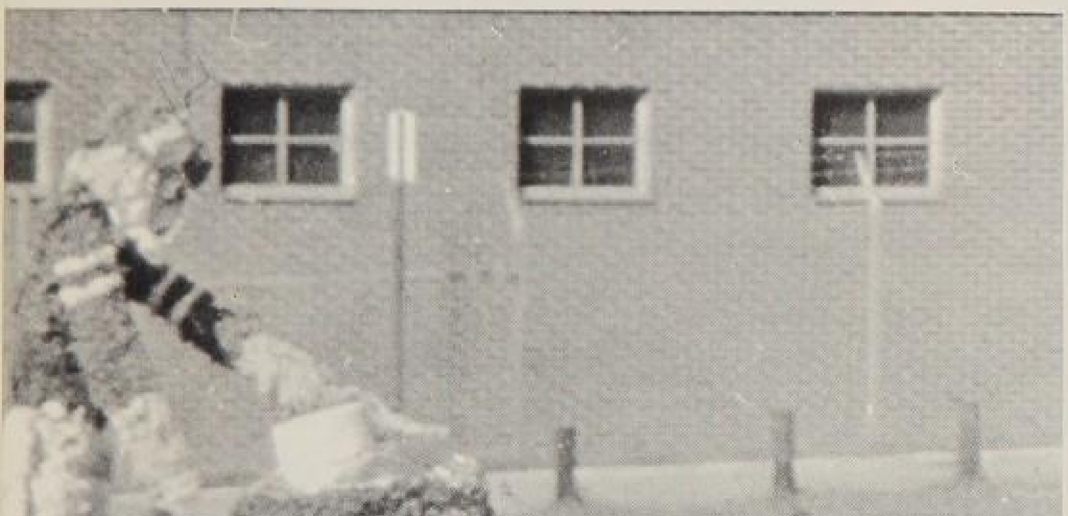

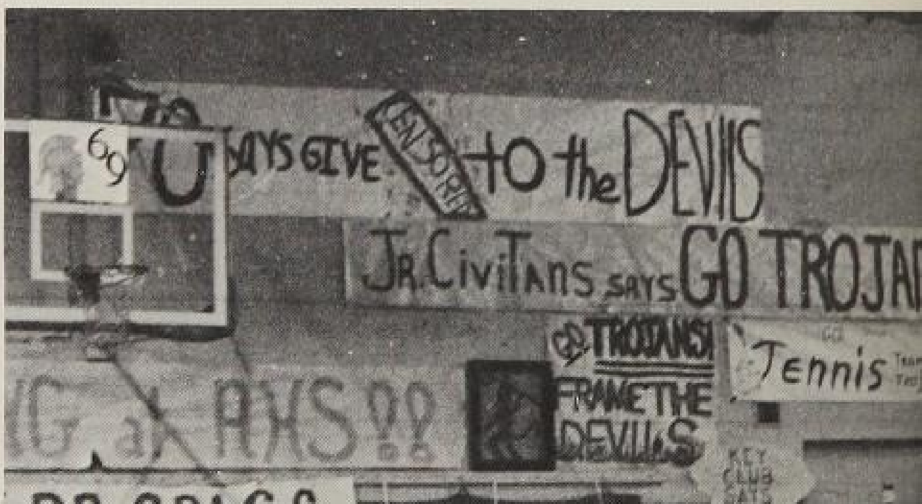

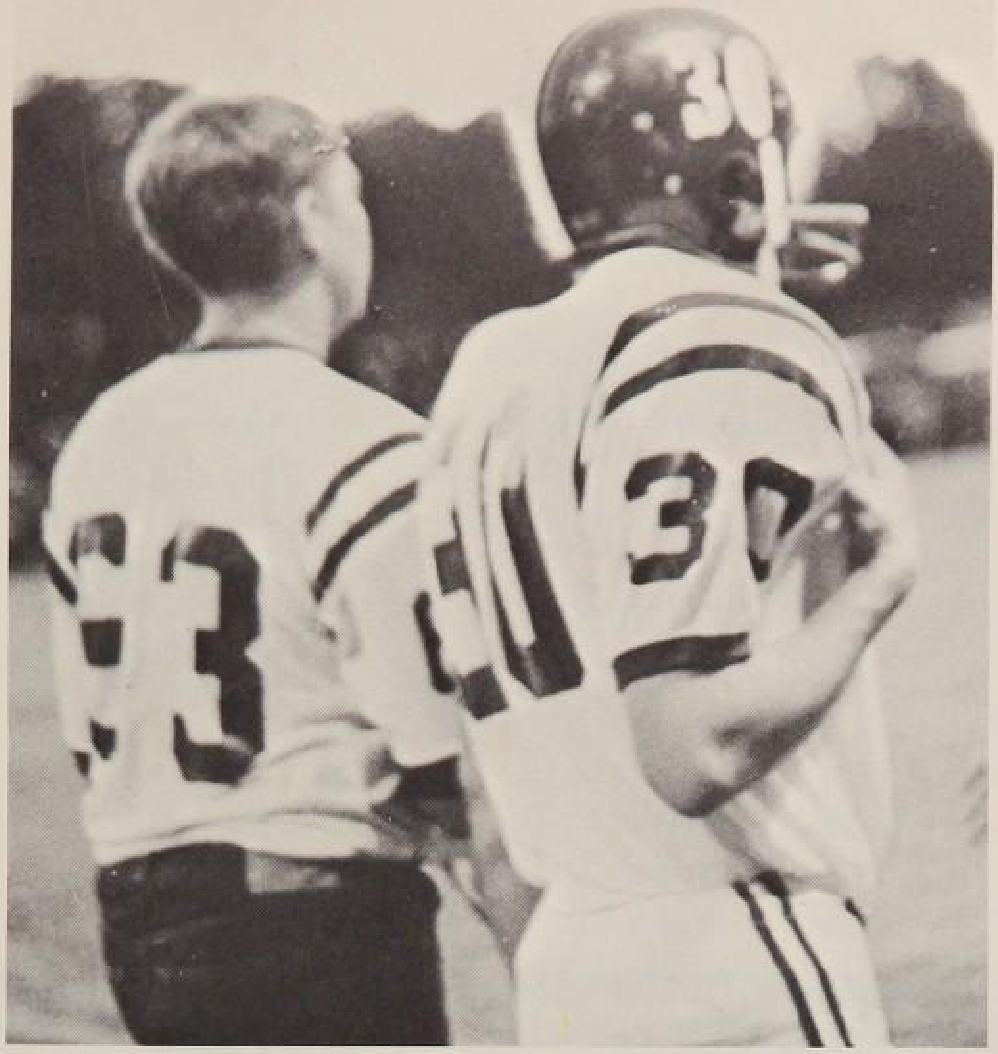

In all of the achievements and successes we enjoy today, we share the unity of a whole—a high school—our AHS.

Although we enjoy the friendships we share, sometimes today we need to be alone. In solitude we are able to dream, to wish, to think, to plan. We are able to find security in belonging to the group, but the acquisition of knowledge, the development of talents, and the value of self-expression make us mature individuals. We are aware of the world today and are trying to discover the part we play in its pattern.

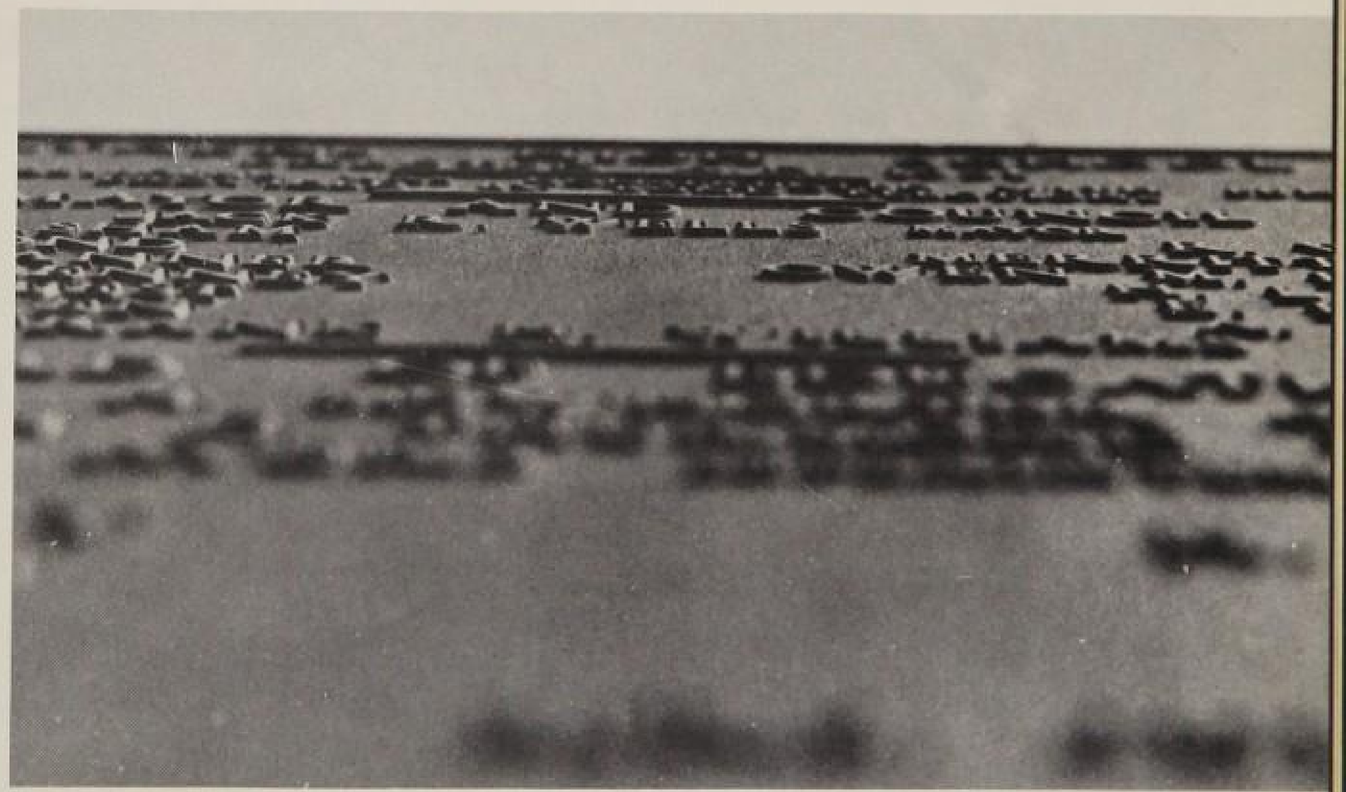

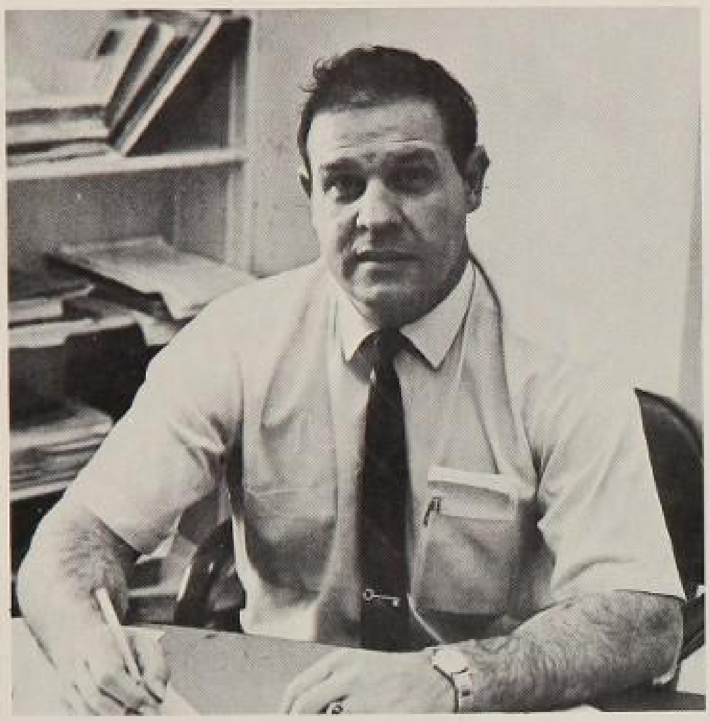

We search, and in the end our search is fulfilled. Only at last do we realize what belonging has meant to us today.

ORGANIZATIONS

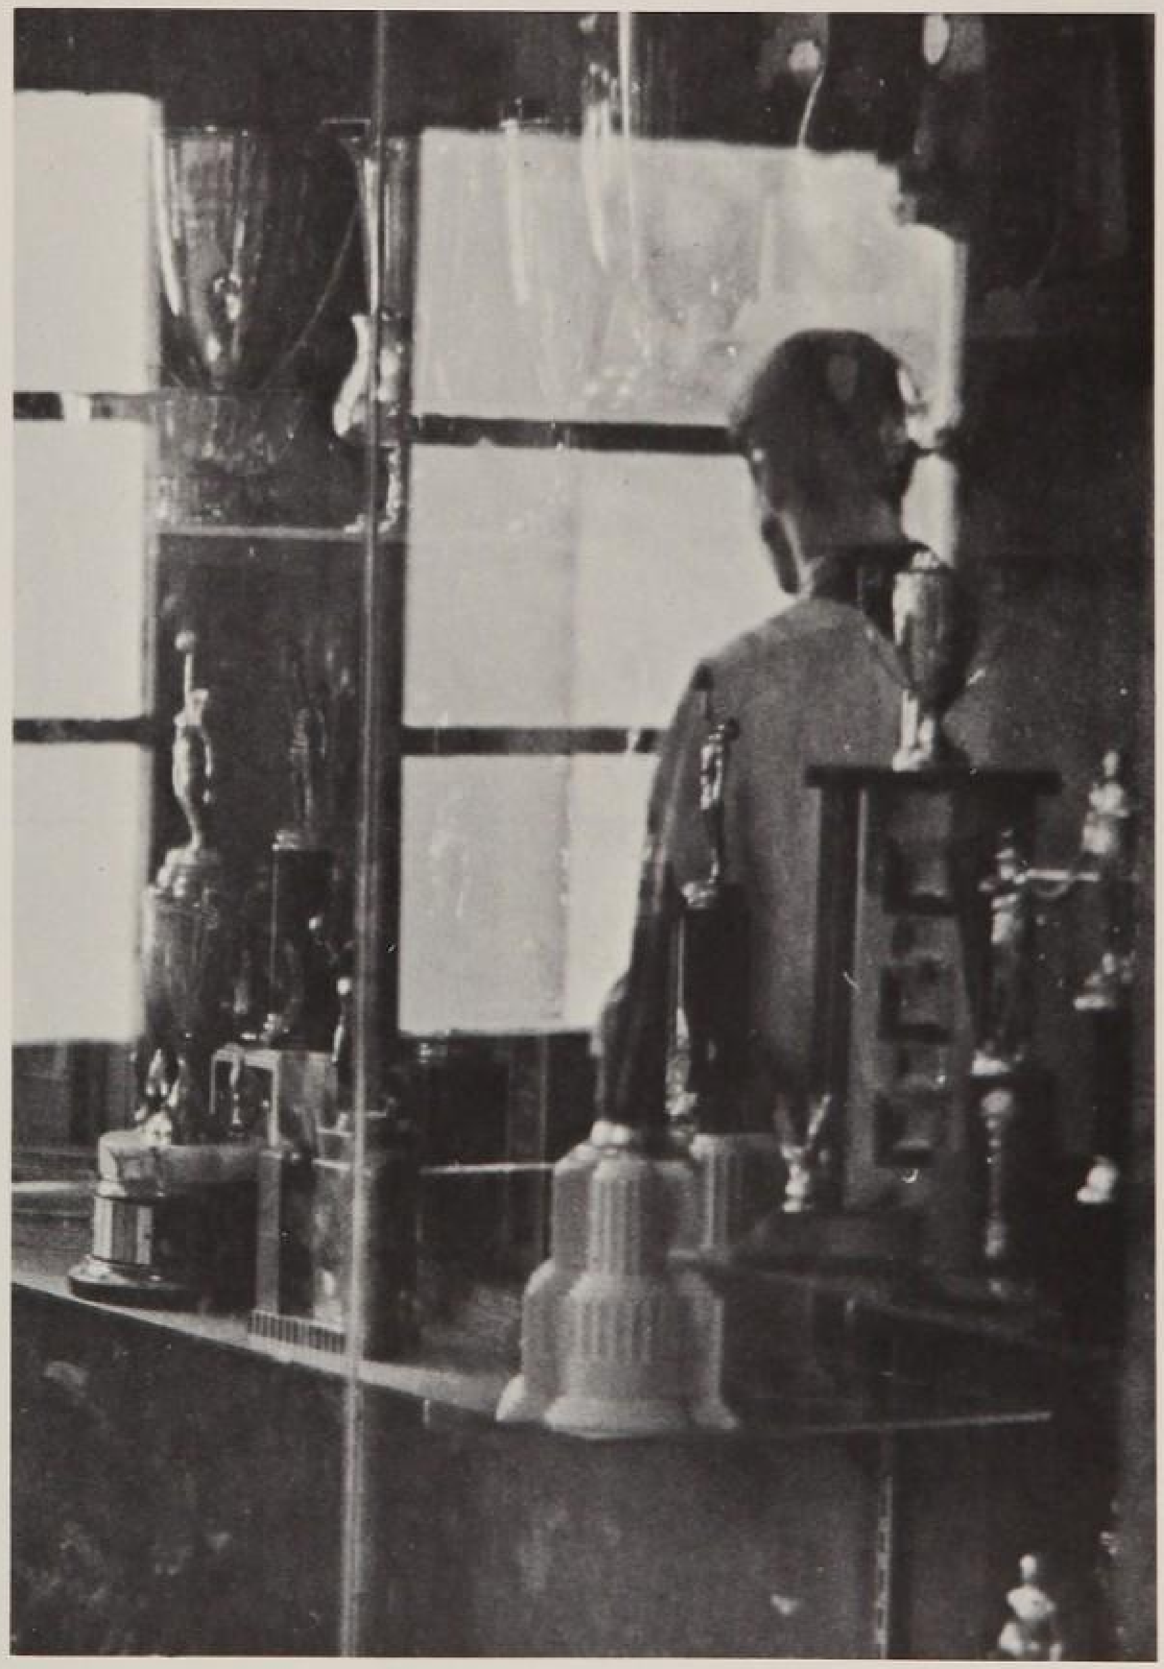

What are Organizations but a means of reaching one another by working together to reach an ultimate goal. . .

Today we learn through our experiences, by working and sharing memories together as a whole . . . We are all a part of Organizations.

ACTIVITES

"There is nothing more beautiful than a rainbow, but it takes both rain and sunshine to make a rainbow. If life is to be rounded and many-colored like the rainbow, both joy and sorrow must come to it."

We are the certain something that can transform a mediocre moment into an ecstatic experience. We can cause heartbreaking tears or jubilant smiles. We are an extra added attraction that makes each day worth living and every special memory unforgettable. We are a necessary factor in everyone's hopes and realities. We are Activities.

The Athlete

The 1968-1969 school year brought another season of athletic competition in which Athens High School was unsurpassed. The physical talents displayed by members of the student body far exceeded the norm of the average high school. But what made 1968-1969 a year for the athlete?

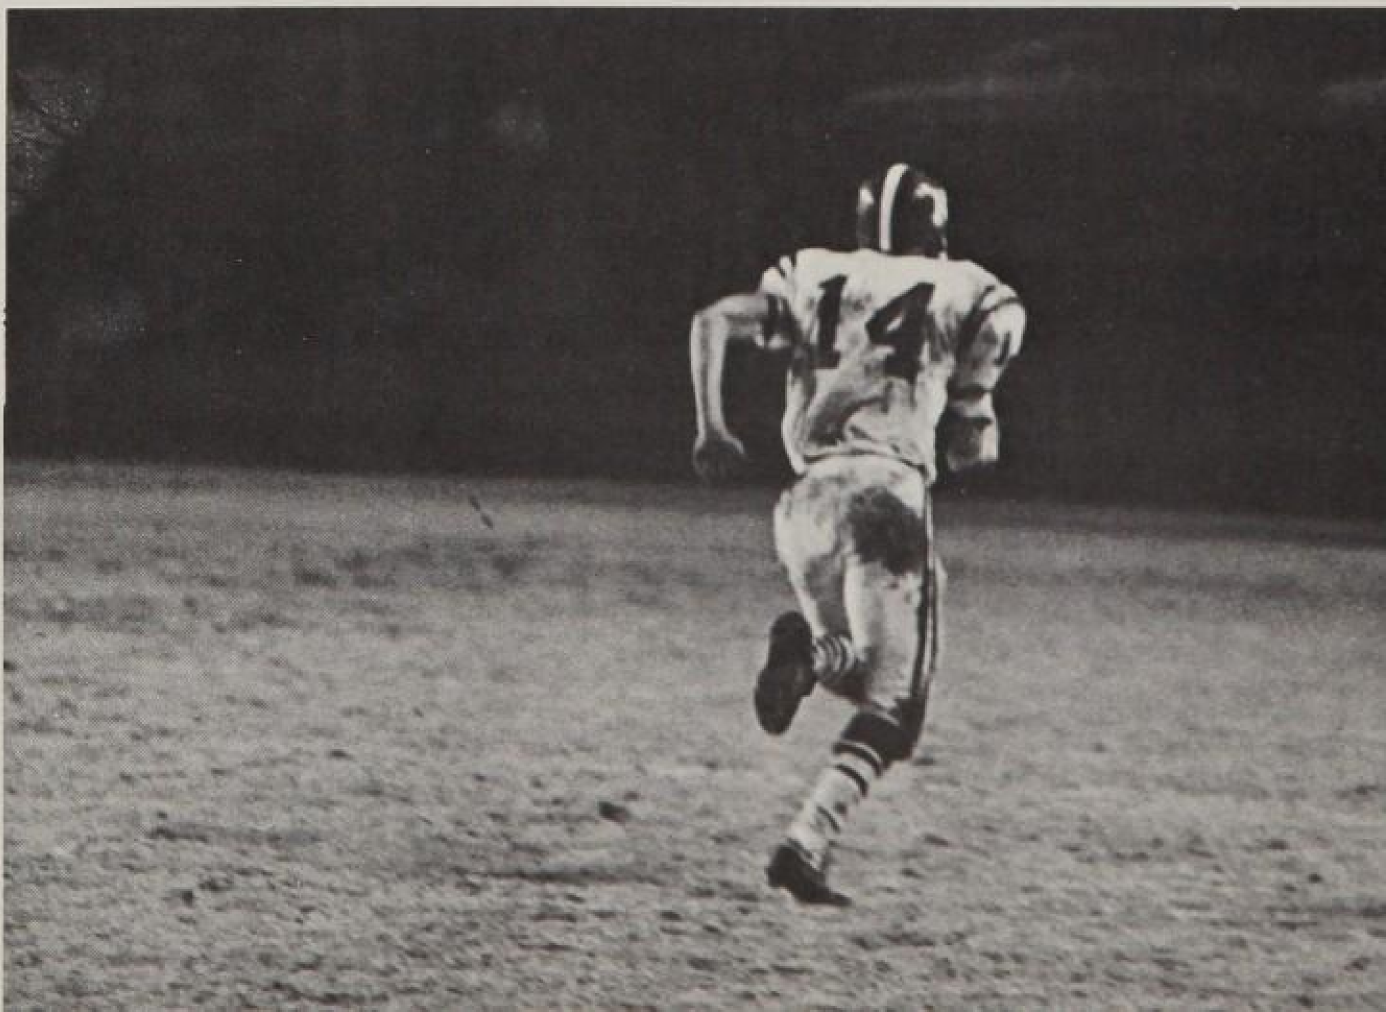

The sporting events at Athens High create a challenge for any student who desires to get involved. The student readily accepts the emotional impact of dramatic conflict found in all sporting events when two men of two teams are pitted against each other. The athlete knows that the excitement and tension of a sporting event is incomparable. In a matter of seconds stretched side by side and drawn out by the athlete's intensities of thought and action, the course of the event evolves and changes.

Athens High School athletes are superior because they go beyond the acceptance of the challenge of athletic competition. A sporting event creates conditions which demand maximum use of one's natural and acquired abilities. It is necessary to use every human element in order to survive or excell in the events. Athens High School athletes choose to excell. The athletes are willing to pay the price to achieve goals in maintaining superiority. The athlete is willing to work grueling and tedious hours for thorough preparation. The hours may include running or swimming that extra lap when one knows he can go no further. The hours may include going over football or basketball plays not once apiece but ten or twenty times; or hitting golf or tennis balls until it's too late to see. The athletes at Athens High are also unsurpassed because they have that inner desire which stimulates an extra effort to win. The same desire makes the football player come up with the tackle when he has already been knocked down twice, or the 5'10" guard in basketball to come up with the rebound among the towering opposition.

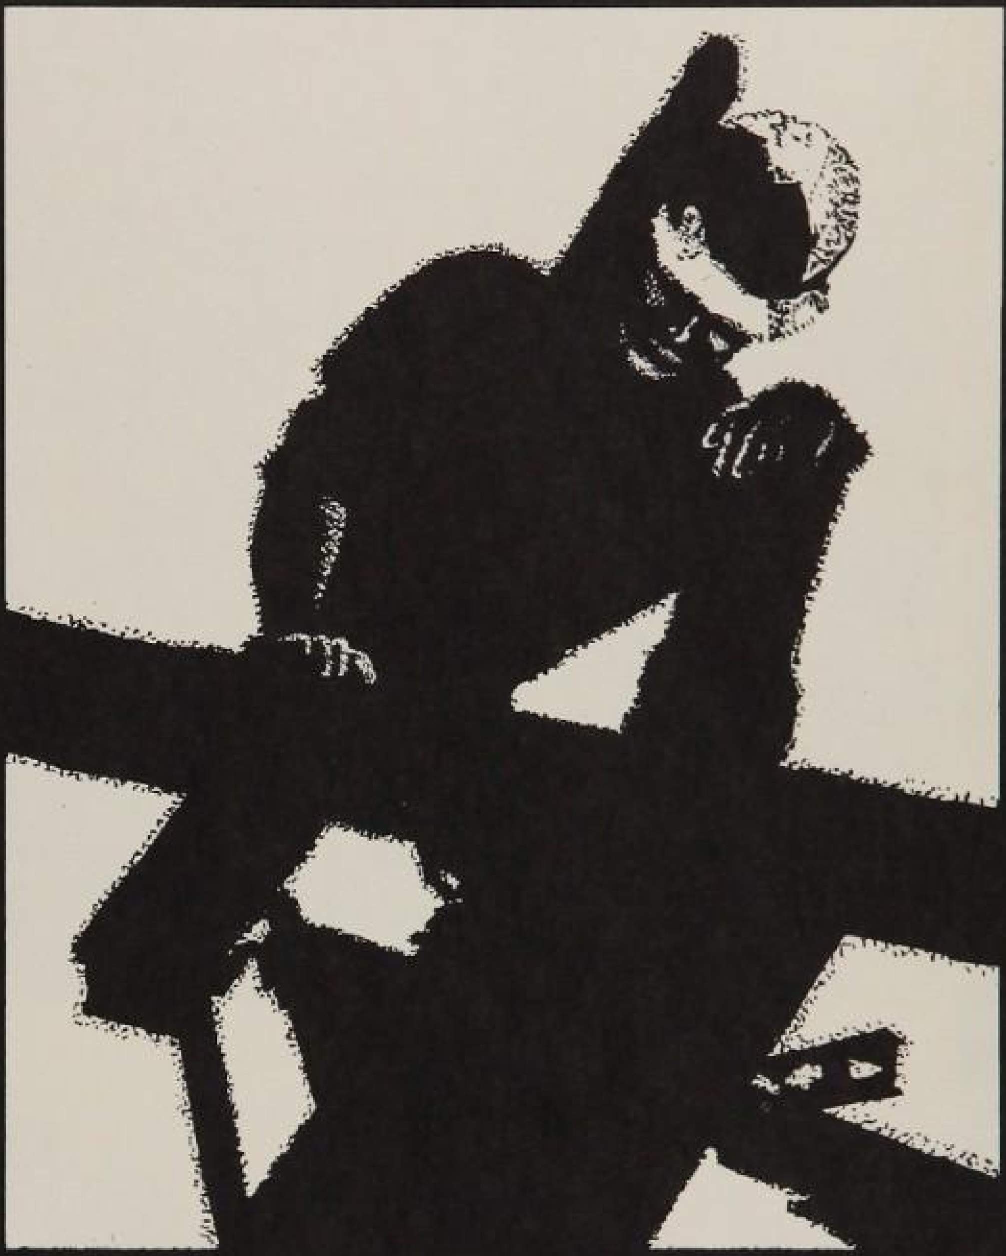

Is meeting the challenge and the desire to excell worth the self-sacrifice necessary to be an athlete at Athens High School? Any athlete knows that the thrill of competition, the love of team and the self-satisfaction is well worth the long hours of hard work. The athlete knows that when it hurts a little more it feels a lot better when he is a winner.

"There is no greater glory for a man as long as he lives than that which he wins by his own hands and feet." Homer, The Odyssey.

TAKES LIVES

Today we are able to view clearly in retrospect all of the times past, the times that are not recapturable but that remain with us, making us whole. We come to realize the significance of today in our lives. The day has been used up, and we regret the things left undone. Through young eyes, we look to an even brighter tomorrow when we can reach even higher goals, but the three years we spend together at Athens High School will remain with us, for these are the years which make the most meaningful imprint on our impressionable youth.

We determined to make today ours. We were a part of all that was young, vital, alive, now. We excelled in athletic and academic undertakings, experiencing both rapturous victories and heartbreaking defeats. We adhered to AHS tradition and to the chains of childhood, but we reached new heights of freedom by our independent spirit. Companionship, group efforts, fulfillments, disillusionments, fatigue—all these helped us gain success, wisdom, and a sense of awareness. The group and conformity protected some of us from knowing ourselves.

Solitude was always a silhouette against the world of today. It was a time of dreaming, wishing, knowing—a time of internal tears and disappointments—a time of emptiness, of fullness. Solitude was yet another important thing: the inquiring mind, the mixed emotions, the dark and lonely bewilderment and bereavement, the love, the hate—the trying to make it in a sometimes impatient today. We had our convictions and our ideals. Our knowledge gained from the past will prepare us for the future.

Soon we will be but tomorrow's yesterday, a single memory. The spirit of our youth, the Trojan spirit that united us, will remain with us as we continue to research for our role in the shifting patterns of today's world.

"Look to this day!
For it is life, the very life of life.
In its brief course lie all the verities
and realties of our existence:
The bliss of growth,
The glory of action,
The splendor of beauty.
For yesterday is but a dream,
And tomorrow is only a vision;
But today well lived makes every
Yesterday a dream of happiness,
And every tomorrow a vision of hope . . ."
